

Terms of Service

Version 1.0 · 14 September 2026

These terms apply when you buy Mazevos. Buying it means you accept them.

What you are buying

Mazevos is a trading journal you run yourself. You pay once and download a zip containing the complete source code. No subscription, no licence key, no server of mine. What you may do with the code is set out in the End User Licence Agreement.

What you provide

You host it yourself: your own database in your own account, and, if you use the AI features, an API key you buy yourself. Those accounts, bills and backups are yours.

Updates

Updates I publish within twelve months of your purchase are included, and you download them yourself. After that your copy keeps working, you just stop getting new versions. I do not promise any particular update, or any particular number of them.

Support

Support is a private Discord server you are invited to after checkout. I read it and I answer. It is not a staffed helpdesk and I do not promise a response time. If I close or move it, I will give you another way to reach me.

If something is wrong

Mazevos is sold as it is. I do not promise it suits any particular purpose or runs without faults. If it does not work as described, message me through the store or in the Discord: I will help you get it running, and if I cannot, I will refund you. If you are a consumer in the EU, EEA or UK you also have mandatory rights if what you bought is faulty, and nothing here limits them.

Not financial advice

Mazevos records and analyses trades you have already decided to make. Nothing it shows you is advice, a recommendation or a prediction. Your trading decisions, and your losses, are yours.

Liability

If I cause you loss, my liability is limited to the amount you paid. That limit does not apply where the law does not allow it, which includes death or personal injury, loss I cause intentionally or through gross negligence, and your mandatory rights as a consumer.

Law

Swedish law applies. If you are a consumer, that does not take away the protection of the mandatory consumer law where you live, and you can bring a claim in your own courts. If you live outside the EU, EEA and UK, your local consumer law may give you different rights from those described here; where it does, it applies, and I am not trying to contract around it.